Re: 9A-SA-51235, 07/31/2000

SAPD has vast experience in crisis management. Its skillful handling of this high profile incident abundantly manifested its proven ability to quickly mobilize its crisis management infrastructure essentially composed of its integrated command, tactical, negotiations, communications, and support elements.

It is noteworthy to note that the Bureau was instrumental in the initiation of SAPD's Negotiations Unit in the early 1980's and that various members of this unit have attended the Bureau's Crisis Negotiations Class in Quantico. Likewise, several San Antonio Division negotiators are graduates of the SAPD Negotiations Basic and Advance Classes and the philosophies of both agencies are virtually the same. A close working relationship, which has been long in existence, has been maintained by joint participation in actual crises as well as periodic training, such as the recent Armadillo Field Training Exercise held at the Alamodome in January 2000.

Federal jurisdiction exists in this matter related to U.S. Immigration Law and violation of 18 U.S.C. 1203, Hostage Taking, inasmuch as [redacted] made extortionate demands of the federal government. The U.S. Attorney's Office and the Bexar County District Attorney's Office have not yet decided whether federal prosecution will be pursued.

ASSESSMENT

It appears that a perception was formed by the San Antonio Police, during FBI negotiations, that the FBI may have been trying to take over the case or was dilatory in transitioning the negotiations call to the SAPD van. These perceptions may have been formed in large part based on:

1. Lack of real time information on negotiations taking place at the FBI office; and
2. Questions posed by Bureau personnel regarding federal jurisdiction and the possibility of moving SAPD negotiations operations to the FBI office.

It is clear that the position of the San Antonio Division from the beginning was to assist SAPD in whatever manner possible. All personnel involved worked diligently to get the caller in communication with the SAPD van in a prudent, reasonable, and timely manner. Pertinent information was passed in the form of notes, faxes, and telephone calls to the SAPD van as it was received. Efforts were ongoing to establish a parallel negotiations line for the benefit of the van.

Federal jurisdiction and SAPD negotiation operations relocation questions were logical and posed for the purpose of covering all options. There is no question that the exigent circumstances looming greatly over the crisis contributed to the aforementioned perceptions. Specifically, a desperate, mentally ill person, voicing suicidal ideations, threatening to kill a much revered clergyman and purportedly holding a pinless hand grenade in his hand.

The FBI team worked diligently and quickly established a teamwork momentum. A supportive attitude and conduct was evident on the part of all personnel. The call with [redacted] was transitioned smoothly from the FBI office to the SAPD van with no breakdown in rapport.
